

Hello Campolindo Choir students and community,

It is with incredibly full eyes that I inform you the remaining Titanic shows will be cancelled. I cannot express the multitude of emotions I am currently feeling and that you in the show surely are as well. I don't quite have it in me to make the many obvious observations about the parallels to Titanic nor do I want to make light of actual human loss so I will instead highlight a few of the things that have brought me joy on this fabulous voyage -

- Watching the students build a community of mutual support and encouragement
- Giving students a platform to express the full gamut of human emotion and watching them seize and relish the opportunity
- Providing an experience in which students can learn about themselves in a meaningful and vulnerable way while feeling safe doing so
- Hearing students reach the full vocal potential from the spark we heard at auditions way back in October
- Seeing students of all stripes collaborate, befriend, and rely on one another for a purpose greater than themselves
- Joining students from tech, instrumental music, and vocal music to create a true behemoth of student energy united for a common outcome
- Watching students come to life with the special and extra inspiration of just the right costume, makeup, lighting, prop, or set piece
- Having students moved to tears over the pure beauty and insightfulness of the music as well as the sheer terror of the story
- Uniting our broader community to coalesce around an event and a group of students in support of their chance to experience the magic of creating art together

Students - You inspire me every day and this show is just one of the many ways you make me feel lucky to be able to come to work. We get the opportunity to decorate time with beautiful harmony, drama, and human expression. I am reminded how much joy I get from the process and while losing a final opportunity to perform is heartbreaking, we all were able to grow and learn through the process. What an incredible delight every moment has been.

For those who have purchased tickets to this weekend's performances already, we hope you will consider the following options:

1. Consider your ticket purchase a donation to the Campolindo Choral Fund, this donation will be tax deductible and CCF will provide the necessary paperwork for this designation.
